In May 2004 Agder University College in cooperation with the Nordic Network on the Teaching of Language, Text and Literature organised the 2nd international conference on Multimodality in Kristiansand, Norway. The proceedings cover the themes of Multimodality, genre and design, Multimodal classroom practices and Reception of multimodal texts. The volume provides an insight into current research in the field as well as the starting point for a new outlook on text, media and use in a multimodal perspective.

Maj Asplund Carlsson is asst. prof. in education at Göteborg University and holds a doctorate in comparative literature. She has published several books on children's reading and the use of children's literature in preschool. She was also a member of the organizing committee of the 2d international conference on multimodality.
